Six Ways 'Til Sunday

Rise Against

The years unfold in one moment
Voices that we heard so loud
Are now suddenly silenced inside this crowdYou're surrounded by the lives
Of those who found something to hold
So bringing everybody down is all you knowYou've been hiding so long, you can't find yourself
In this sheltered life you live
When everything you want is at your fingertips
You'll never know what need isClaiming to be something different
So wanting to believe that you're better than the rest
To make up for your self esteemYou talk to hear your own voice and You've left me no choice but to choose
I miss the person that you were but I don't miss youYou've been hiding so long, you can't find yourself
In this sheltered life you live
When everything you want is at your fingertips
You'll never know what need isYou're the new revolution
The angst filled adolescent
You fit the stereotype well1, 2, 3, goYou're the new revolution
The angst filled adolescent
You fit the stereotype wellYou're the new revolution
The angst filled adolescent
You fit the stereotype wellYou're the new revolution
The angst filled adolescent
You fit the stereotype well
