Transcontinental Redeye

Shannon Mcarthur

I don't know when the next time that I see you will be, but I'm watching the moments play black and white, on this old TV of this Transcontinental Redeye
clouds too rough to flyeven if the wind blows strong the stars are gonna guide me home and home is where I'll find my heart I can love you steady through this storm about to startand the condensation's freezin' on the window and the warning crys are coming through the radio and my heart singseven if the wind blows strong
the stars are gonna guide me home
and home is where I'll find my heart
about to startoutside, and I feel so alive, oh you know I'd dive through the darkest cloud, I'd make it out fine if I landed by your sideeven if the wind blows strong
the stars are gonna guide me home
and home is where I'll find my heart
about to startWritten by Shannon McArthur and Michael Getches
