

Windrider

Ensiferum

He appears from the mists of a dismal lake
And the sky crumbles as he flies
Through the dimensions alone The night has laid a cape on his shoulders
And with a grin on his face he attacks
With his loyal soldiers, into the unknown There's no place for him in this world and no ties
And all this hate and grief unite in his mind Windrider, seeks freedom with vengeance on his mind
To escape from the crimson sky grave and fly away
Windrider, is waiting for the final day
When he'll be released from the shackles of a slave In the eye of the storm he rides
With jaded memories of his life
As the fires are dancing colorfully
He is struggling to survive Trapped in a maze, can't get away
What have you became now
Take the hammer of the elders
And crush your way out There's no place for him in this world and no ties
And all this hate and grief unite in his mind Windrider, seeks freedom with vengeance on his mind
To escape from the crimson sky grave and fly away
Windrider, is waiting for the final day
When he'll be released from the shackles of a slave His presence is shaking the land
As he stands at the mountain peak
His instincts are getting weak
But there is still hunger in his eyes
That keeps him alive He wears the mask of the hunted
Arts of light for him have been granted
He lives in the fragments of time
Waiting for his time to die Windrider, seeks freedom with vengeance on his mind
To escape from the crimson sky grave and fly away
Windrider, is waiting for the final day
When he'll be released from the shackles of a slave Windrider
Windrider
