Holding The Key

Jason Gray

I came here tonight with a mission
To confess what I'm trying to hide
But here in the hour of decision
I'd rather give you the company lineThere are secrets I don't want to tell you
And wounds you might not want to see
But they keep me bound to my sorrow
And I really want to be free
And you're the one holding the keyYou don't have to give me an answer
An answer is the last thing I need
There's no magical cure for this cancer
I just need you to listen me
'Cause you're the one holding the keyWe were made with these hearts
Meant to be open
Then we locked them away
Afraid of being broken
But we're given each other to set it free
And you're the one holding the keyThis dark room is perfect for hiding
But I don't want to hide anymore
You can't force the light here inside it
But you can help me open the door
You're the one holding the keyWe were made with these hearts
Meant to be open
Then we locked them away
Afraid of being broken
But we're given each other to set it free
And you're the one holding
The key to the truth
Of what's really going on
Your listening ear
Is the grace of God
Love will take the shackles off
But you're the one holding the keyWe all need it sooner or later
A safe place for telling the truth
I'm happy returning the favor
'Cause I'm holding the key for you
