

Descender

Owen

I saw her climb the 13th rung
I heard her singing the song she sung I caught the flower that she flung I saw a paper tab burning on her tongue
She's an angel you'll agree Biggest damn halo that you're ever gonna see He mouth roars her eye shine
If you're painfully honest you can stand in her light, man I saw her blow her fragile fuse
I tried to crack her code but it was no use She's concentrating on levitation
Her body burst into violet hues
I took a look at her tattered shoes
I offered her mine but she refused
She said: I want these cuts on my feet, man gotta become sensitive as I can She reached down put some trash in her hair, man
She don't wonder and she don't ponder She keeps walking but she never wanders
The tiny cuts in your skin
They let a little fresh air in You dilate your opening
And when it starts to gush:
START TO SING
I saw her bleed
I saw her kneel
I don't pretend to understand What she is feeling
I saw her rise
A golden ray of light Appeared between her eyes
She rose above the gathering crowd

The sky was dark and the weather was loud
She coalesced up in the cloud
She converted my without a word Her churchbell heartbeat was all I heard

Song Discussions is protected by U.S. Patent 9401941. Other patents pending.

Lyrics provided by <https://damnyrics.com/>