

The Arrival of the Fimbul Winter

Amon Amarth

The bleak fimbulwinter arrived
Raging across the world
With a fury that defied the memory of man
Terrible wars where fought,
The like had never been seen
Men slew without a thought
The ties of kinship were no more
Skoll and Hati, the ravenous wolves
Arose and devoured the sun and the moon
Darkness descended upon the earth
And the stars fell from the skies
Loud blows heimdall the horn's in the air
Odin quests the head of Mim
Now shakes the holy ash where it stands
The ancient tree moans, Fenris breaks free
How are the Aesir?
How are the Elves?
Loud sounds Jotunheim
Aesir comprise
By the stone doors dwarfs are moaning
The mountains wise men
Know you now or not? With his shield at hand
Hrym travels from the east
The serpent is turning, enormous in rage
The serpent breaks the waves
The eagle screams
Nidhogg's tearing corpses
Free comes Nagelfar
Loki leads the legions of the dead
In holy war
Against the justice made by Aesir
