

Vultures of Culture

Nahko and Medicine for the People

it all starts to make sense, it all starts to make, aha with all this omens we've been calling it in, aha it all starts to make sense all my thoughts and particularly my prayers have not forgotten the indigenous for the western men has been working so hard against us with his western medicine and his land management and his fences or the way he protects and the way he preserves never the way he neglects the people that came first ya you know the same ones that he massacred and it all starts to make sense where we are going, where we are at, where we've been, aha
it all starts to make sense
well creator the behavior of the collective youth definitely seems to be in favor of the western man's invasion i see 'em pumping fear like an i.v. spending like a disease and all the while building a clueless army of god fearing youth with no knowledge of the truth and there selfishness is so ugly
and it all starts to make sense
well who we gotta talk to if we wanna survive this mess
it all starts to make sense itty-bitty economies based on geographies fueled by spectators and their money and their need for things that will not last so go on build a hotel, a giftshop in the wilderness makin' a profit capitalizin' on it and all the while trampling on everything that is sacred
and it all starts to make sense
why the western man destroys things he doesn't understand
it all starts to make sense
well all these patterns and wasteful destructive practices livin' like thirh world country inside this country forget the government that puts the people in poverty and it bothers me when the people are goin' hungry and corporate companies have got their got their cupboards full of groceries it's disgusting how you can do nothing and complain about the situation in which you are livin'

and it all starts to make sense they're vultures of culture and they're picking on all my friends
it all starts to make sense
oh indigenous imprisonment well i dedicate my life to the people who need the light to help them rise above the scam on the land and their lives and i'm cuttin' like a knife all the lies by the slice independent of this democracy is really worth a bite my request is reasonable, a tribe undefeatable ambitiously be moving towards solutions that are feasible it's unbelievable all the slow movin' people and they could care less just as long as they are comfortable it's unforgivable because the conditions now criticle whether or not you are ready we are approaching the pinnacle it's difficult to say exactly what to do but the change begins with me and i reflect it back to you and you
and you
and you
come on man
make the movement move
make the movement move
it all starts to make sense
it all starts to make sense, aha with all these omens and the moon phase we're in
it all starts to make sense
well i dedicate my life to the people who need the light help 'em rise about the scam on the land and thier lives and i'm cuttin' lke a knife all the lies by the slice independent of this democracy is really worth a bite
my request is reasonable a tribe undefeatable ambitiously be movin' towards solutions that are feasible
it's unbelievable all the slow movin' people and could care less as long as they are comfortable it's unforgivable because the conditions now are criticle whether or not you're ready we are now approachin' a pinnacle
it's difficult to say exactly what to do
but the change begins with me and i reflect it back to you
and you
and you
and you
come on man
make the movement move
make the movement move

make the movement move
it all starts to make sense
it all starts to make sense
it all starts to make sense

Lyrics provided by <https://damnlyrics.com/>