

Night Lights

Backpackparty

Sleeping in cheap hotels
Filled up with oyster shells
We don't get overwhelmed
The window panes make shelves Evening paints out the sky
Guest list is satisfied
Bright Crimson floating high from snaps electric eyes
Streets are like coffee pots, they'll never stop us watch
Hang gliding to the docks
Red lights we never walk
Get stung by jellyfish, an open ended ditch
Of anything we'd miss the scale of the Brooklyn Bridge Night lights beach houses awkward decision
That leave us on top of the moon
August is endless and I am so friendless
We'll leave and they won't have a clue
Drive by sightings who think that they'll find us
It's not hard to trust me alright
August is endless and I am so friendless
We're leaving the city tonight Sugar dissolves our well
Feel like we've never felt
Win contests never held
We'll make ideas melt High tide is rolling in so we step back a bit
Creatures become our friends they go of fear again
Reasoning poltergeist aquamarine in white
Guess we don't sleep at night lets change this tired life Echoes of solitude these walls are talking too
Chasing the afternoon of sunset avenue Night lights beach houses awkward decision
That leave us on top of the moon
August is endless and I am so friendless
We'll leave and they won't have a clue
Drive by sightings you think that they'll find us
It's not hard to trust me alright
August is endless and I am so friendless
We're leaving the city tonight Question the answers they don't matter
Throw 'em all right out the door
Switch direction for protection because we're not running anymore
These changing autumn leaves are filling me with everything I need
To open up will subtle circuitry and bring me to my knees We're searching alleyways to find out where the end is, at the start
It's not a shallow place it's leading to the same one as my heart
We'll take a trolley down and hopefully the coast is looking clear

Cause if it's not we'll have to sit a bit and wait right here
The sky is crashing down the ground is rising up and I am torn

Between the canopies of falling trees and ozone but I swore

If we're ever to imagine It would be a different scene

Only if you can distinguish what I meant from what I mean
Night lights beach houses awkward decision

That leave us on top of the moon

August is endless and I am so friendless

We'll leave and they won't have a clue

Drive by sightings you think that they'll find us

It's not hard to trust me alright

August is endless and I am so friendless

We're leaving the city tonight

Lyrics provided by

<https://damnllyrics.com/>