

Still Complaining

Wrens

this year has killed so many without a moment's thought seduced by a promise that things were soon to get better the meaning of life has been lost forever and they're waiting for me to discover them one haven't you heard this old line before out of boredom they married one sun spoiled day accelerated to murder while blaming each other along the way i finally started thinking straight when i found there was nothing left to investigate do we ever know when to end or to be satisfied its time to look at something you've seen before but never noticed something you've dragged on its belly through all of your years entitled "the greatest companion" as it always stayed by your side i'll pray that things get better
