

The Well

Jennifer Warnes

We can make it, I know we can
Only time will tell
Lets take a walk down to the water
Lets go the well You hear that low humming underground
Hear the skylark in the dell
The wild world is speaking
Lets go to the well Sometimes my heart feels like a dandelion
Seeds scattered in a careless wind
And nothing to show for my life and time
But innocent wonder in the face of thunder
Feeling like something is about begin Lets build a bonfire fr the stories we tell
Of wild years, the wasted tears
And he silent way they fell
See the curls of smoke rising up To the big old sky as the moonlight falls
Down over those distant hiss
I dont want to be anywhere else anymore
Lets go to the well You better believe my faith in you
It is wide and steady as a Texas moon
And when this stuff starts rolling through
It's as all innocent wonder in the face of thunder
Feeling like something is coming soon We can make it, I know we can
Only time will tell
Lets take a walk down to the water
Lets go the well And lets go down to those hills
Through the trees across the rocky path
Down to the Blanco river Come with me darling, the sky is a so big today
My hearts so full
Cmon, let's go to the well now, babe
