Jinny Joe

Where will you be, my blue eyed son?
 Oh when your daddy race is run
 When your sire, his song has sung Where will you be my little one?

Where will you be, my black haired son?
 Oh when your daddy time has come When no more the flesh I heed Where will you be, seed of my seed?

 Jinny joe, winds will blow carrying you onward your, seed to sow while fading dandelions
 Lie on the earth below

 your mother passed you from her womb and your bed cry echoed through the room through heart and mind, and then past me to echo through eternity

 i am the tree, leaf, branch and root whoâ€™s hands shall gather of my fruit for flowers must blossom to fade and die cast seed on the wind and rings unwind

 Jinny joe, winds will blow
 carrying you onward your seed to sow
 while fading danielins
 lie on the earth below
