Blind Hope

Stavesacre

a room, thick with wineand all of the sadnessof a heart that time alone won't heal:do you remember all the bad timeswhen precious few were found by my side?you stood bywhile others whispered word of my demise.your presence... a comfort in the the longest of nights i cried and cried and you let me hide behind the love you always gave(chorus)i know you had no blind hope of saving the worldyou only gave it and asked none in returnyou knew that though years may pass by,loving takes more time for some of us.while in retreat to all our outer stationsdeath has caught us all by surprise you told me,you gave so long and nothing was returned a burden that you no longer choose to endure and all you were is gone nowburied by the years and lost in all of the words(chorus)i don't havesome blind hope of saving the world i only wanted you to know your love is returnedi know that the years have passed by,but loving takes more time for some of usa car crash and another hero falls breaking hearts and telephone callseveryone here and no one was there at all what now?
