Beneath the Moon

Ari Herstand

My sheets are tangled around my legs inside my room I twist my angle to free my thoughts and lose this tune thats been tugging from that night I left my necktie in your room thats been humming in the air each night I lay awake beneath the moonA different battle Every night a tangle war
My thoughts are shadows darkened by your light with more sleepless nights staring at the moon
The same light that once lit the hammock where we first kissed that June beneath the moonIf you could feel the loss that has been blinding me You wouldnt be so quick to make me lose my sleep
But you dont help me hold onto that night I lost my sight beneath the moonI bought a new necktie the first since I lost the last for good I made it a black tie
This wont stain like the last one could
