

Where You Are

Whitney Houston

I saw the news this morning
Saw your face across the screen
And as I poured my coffee

I picked up a magazineBut as I turned the page, and looked inside, there you were again
Oh, these lonely times, they never seem to end

You're too far

I know I should be there where you areToday I did some shopping
Just had to clear my mind again
(I can't stop thinkin' 'bout you)

I hopped into a taxi, seemed

In a moment I was home, home againBut as I turned the page, and looked inside, my heart could not pretend
Oh, those feelings, not those feelings, not again

You're too far

I know I should be there where you areTossing and turning in my sleep
I can't make it without you, now
I'm gonna take the next plane out

I got to get to where you areNo matter how near or how far
Or then if you're a star

I know I should be there where you areBut as I turned the page, and looked inside, there you were again
Oh, these lonely times, they never seem to end

You're too far

I know I should be there where you are
