Velvet Alley

Strung Out

you can't make me see what you think i should know you dont understand where im coming from we're passing through worlds no perception in time im not the same as when i beganshow me dont tell me whats going on inside your little world you should have never landed on the moon you heard we never reached the sky then shed some light i'll lend a patient eardont let me down i gotta know if something good could grow out on this rock save me one more and i'll be free from the i think it ought to bebabell on could i be wronga silhouette of you and me just negetive space and time just reference to a simpler history i'd sacrifice a million nights for a moments peace with you reflections to dissect realityit's all in what we hold as being real when the symbol kills the substance then we've lost save me one more time and i'll be free from the alleyways of my heart(you can't make me see what you think i should know) im going nowhere im going nowhere inside this state of mind(you can't make me see what you think i should know) we're going nowhere we're going nowhere inside this state of mindsit and stay awhile talk to me about that things that make you real let forget about all that make you and me surrender surrender
