Always A Reason

Eric Benet

What's the use of trying? It never seems to work
The love just doesn't love you is the lesson you've learned
You've mended broken pieces at least a dozen times
To take another chance now, you say no reason whyBut there's always a reason for falling in love
And it's always the darkest before your light comes
Like the winter believes in the promise of sun
Yes, there's always a reason for falling in loveI'm praying your resistance is something that will pass
Like when you said our first kiss would surely be our last Girl, I understand you more than you believe
Like you, my heart's been broken, but you've helped me to seeThat there's always a reason for falling in love
And it's always the darkest before your light comes
Like the winter believes in the promise of sun
Yes, there's always a reason for falling in loveThere's a lifetime of tears we could both leave behind
'Cause in so many ways we've been broken inside
All the questions you ask, we'll find answers together in time
All we need is to believe thatThere's always a reason for falling in love
And it's always the darkest before your light comes
Like the winter believes in the promise of sun
And there's always a reason for falling in loveAlways a reason for falling in love
And it's always the darkest before the light comes
Like the winter believes in the promise of sun
There's always a reason for falling in love

Lyrics provided by https://damnlyrics.com/