

Growin' A Little Each Day

The Doobie Brothers

Well, music, sweet music, Lord, is gonna be played
And the sound of Billy's banjo is like honey on your day
When they promenade down through the square
They'll hear you say, I'm comin' your way
And I'm only a just growin' a little each day
The sun of the delta beams across your face, oh, yeah
And good old Granddad's stories seem to set your pace
All the men you've known in this town
Don't seem to have it and they bring you down
Well, remember you're just growin' a little each day
So throw out your arms and take in the sky
Take down your hair and watch the birds fly
Don't be afraid to show how you feel
Don't sit and hide, don't you know that you're real?
You can have it if you want it, change yourself and play
'Cause you're only, only just growin' a little each day
So woman, sweet woman, why you feel that way?
Don't you know you're only growin' just a little each day?
When the good Lord placed you on this earth
His good words to heed, it's all that you need
And you're only just growin' a little each day
Oh, you're only just growin' a little each day
Oh, sweet woman, you're only just growin'
A little each day
