

I Will Return

Mors Principium Est

When death so swiftly has coveted
The client from this plane
A journey forged in ice has just begun
A crystal line entombment preservation now awaits Proceedings executed hastily
Deceased to be encased
Encapsulated ensured the precious cargo safe
A pending resurrection, rebirth In the distant future
When advancements shall allow
A being to be made again anew The brain to be implanted
Fused within a growth of cells
This vessel but a vehicle
To traverse this mortal realm Pressurized sealed in Ward off the mounting days
Retain, revived, rebirth
Beyond the grave Jealousy, some say it's sickening
They merely can't afford this highest form of luxury
To live again, to carry on the will elite
To live again, advancing through the centuries Until the sky is black and the sun it never shows
'Til the whipping winds of nuclear winter cruelly blow
The gift of immortality has been bestowed
I will return, I will return Cryonics, reanimate this life
Remake the fleshy juggernaut
In which the mind will ride
Cryonics, a wisdom is preserved
Frozen forever evolutionary curve Oh, a renaissance of mad technology
Segregate the wise, eliminate the weak
Oh, painstaking process onward we weed
Reproduce the strong eliminate Heresy some say it's blasphemy
Assuring I'll be in hell when god is through with me
To live again, to forge yourself anew
To live again, to face the godless truth Foolery some say it'll never be Fear will condemn such radical ideology
To live again, to stand above your brood
To live again, the phoenix raised unbruised Until the sky is black and the sun it never shows
'Til the whipping winds of nuclear winter cruelly blow
The gift of immortality has been bestowed
I will return
