Jawbreaker

I could walk a million miles
Suffer freezing rain and failure, it's familiar
This time you have gone too far
Stole my memories and teardrops, now it all stopsOld truths have taken shape
They form themselves inside your landscape
And now I'm a million miles from home
I don't know, still, I can see so clearlyI don't care, suffer sacrifice in vain
Seems like endless pain inside me
It's colliding, still, you've got no choice at all
Make a choice before your world stops
Before your smile dropsYou've made the same mistake again
Did you think I'd really buy it? You shouldn't try it
There's no one here in your defense
They know you lie and don't make sense
Are you getting tense?
