

Max

Ian Thompson

she filled up my glass like she filled up my heart she smiled and walked away and conversation I tried to start but she never had much to say a strange kind she was seemed warm and cold but her charm shone out so bright and I sat down studying her joking and drinking all night I said max please relax I don't know if you're leading me on I'm trying to progress but without much success your smile hits my world like a bomb she spent some time in a daze content to be lost in a book her life was her own she told me one night and she'll never be anyone's cook I said max please relax I don't know if you're leading me on
your smile hits my world like a bomb she wont let me out and she wont let me in a very mysterious kind she had a desire to be somewhere higher she really knew her own mind and the last words she spoke before I awoke from fantasy back to real life don't take it to heart she said when we part I'd never make anyone's wife I said max please relax
I don't know if you're leading me on
your smile hits my world like a bomb Oh max please relax and when I close my eyes I memorize your smile I awake then you're gone
