

Gone Astray

Skullcrack

I can see the summer heat radiating off the street
Feel the hot concrete under the soles of my feet
Stolen beer, no fear, nothing better to do
Close my eyes into yesterday and it's all through
Suburban menace, hopping fences, and we're running wild
With an old soul but the heart of a child
I don't yearn for those days or try to resist the change
Not trying to stay the same, only just maintain
Stolen beer, no fear, nothing better to do
Close my eyes into yesterday and it's all through
No need to reminisce, it's not the past I miss
Only those who live for yesterday
The ones that have gone astray
We have to learn a lesson from our indiscretions
Find out who we should be while we're still naive
Before we're set in our ways, before we're unwilling to change
We have to learn to never, ever act our age
