

All That I Have Sown

Bebo Norman

I believe when they put her in the ground
I think they buried part of me
Because I've been searching, I've been looking all around
I cannot find the heart of me, the heart of me So I'll put my fingers in this soil upon her grave
And I will plant for her a garden
And every flower, a reminder of her face
Will grow up graceful as a pardon And all that grows is her story told
As life unfold here before us
The peace I've found in this broken ground
I can see her in the harvest of all that I have sown Long before I was covered up in gray
Before the old had bent my bones
We grew our children in the red Georgia clay
They were our garden and our home And all that grows is our story told
As life unfolds here before us
The peace we found in that broken ground
I can see them in the harvest of all that I have sown And when my life is done
I pray the kingdom come and take me to glory
And it's living inside me
It was planted like a seed, all to tell a story And I believe when they put me in the ground
There will remain a part of me
Because I've been searching and the joy that I have found
Is living in my family, it's all that I have sown
It's all that I have sown
