

Manchester (String Quartet Live)

Kishi Bashi

I wrote me a book
I hid the last page
I didn't even look
I think I locked it in a cage Wrote a novel
Cause everybody likes to read a novel...It started with a word, and it started pretty well about a rare and fragile verb that I couldn't even spell on the table
I think I left it on the table...I found the last page in the sky, cold and sweet, like an apple
I found you and now the story has its proper endOh hello, will you be mine?
I haven't felt this alive in a long time
All the streets are warm todayI read the signs
I haven't been this in love in a long time
the sun is up, the sun will stay Oh for the new dayThe very last breath of the hero of our tale, would lead you only to guess Did he truly prevail in the sequel?
I guess I'll have to write a sequel...My favourite part's when I die in your arms like a movie It's tragic, but now the story has it's proper endOh hello,
will you be mine?
I haven't felt this alive in a long time
All the streets are warm and grayI read the signs
I haven't been this in love in a long time
The sun is up, the sun will stay
All for the new dayWill you be mine?
The days are short and I wrote me my last rhyme
All the streets are warm today
I read the signs
I haven't been this in love in a long timeIt's been a long time

Song Discussions is protected by U.S. Patent 9401941. Other patents pending.

Lyrics provided by

<https://damnllyrics.com/>