

Adventurer

Lou Reed

You're an adventurer
You sail across the oceans
You climb the himalayas
Seeking truth and beauty as a natural state
You're a queen reborn
Worshipped from above afar
Some see you as an elixir
An elemental natural seeking perfect grace
In a catacomb
Or cave of endless drawings
Prehistoric or religious
Your accomplishments prodigious
Seeking out the perfect tone
Your language so clear
Your voice perfectly turning
As in the city I sit yearning
Blowing rings of smoke from thin cigars
Or driving fast in foreign cars
To capture your remains, huh
You're an adventurer
A turban wet wrapped 'round your head
On the mountainside they predict your death
Oh how you fooled them all
But subjects are a poor excuse
When what you really want's a muse
An inspiring knowledge
Of what comes before
Oooohhh, speeds of light
The momentary flicker
Of a candle in it's wicker basket
Smoking wax, facts
Did you find that superior knowledge
That eluded you in college
Did you find that super vortex
That could cause your cerebral cortex
Oooohhh, to lose it's grip
You're an adventurer
You were out looking for meaning
While the rest of us were steaming
In an inspiring
Ah, urban pit
An adventurer
You enter as I'm dreaming
I wish I'd never wake up
Differentiating scheming from my one true love
You're an adventurer
You love the angles and the cherries
The height and width of levies
The natural bridge and tunnels of the human race
You're an adventurer

Nothing seem to scare you
And if it does it won't dissuade you
You just will not think about it
You dismiss it and defocus
You redefine the locus of your time in space, raceAs you move further from me
And though I understand the thinking
And have often done the same thing
I find parts of me goneYou're an adventurer
And though I'll surely miss you
And of course I'll survive without you
And maybe good will come of thatBut at this point, ah
I anticipate some grieving
And although I know your leaving
Is a necessary adjunct to what we both doAn adventurer
Splitting up the atom
Splitting up the once was
Splitting up the essence of our star-crossed fateNone who meet you
Do forget you, my adventurer
My adventurer, my adventurer-venturer
My adventuress

Lyrics provided by
<https://damnyrics.com/>