

Artificial Limbs

Lieutenant

Fall below the mountain
Briefly crown the hill with light
It wears like chalk
But it's all you've got to hold on through another night
Stay the course, I hear this
But I couldn't help but notice
You're drenched in flames
And that's a shame
The fuel's too low to allow this
To burn
Now learn to remember when you've forgotten how to live
This breath's not yours to take
But it's there to give
When there's nothing
Nothing left from which to draw
Know the weight, the weight once overboard
Will carry, will carry its own load
Use your weight to displace the sea
Give up like a father
Drop knee'd like a pulpit stands
Drop your weapon like a private
And cave in, cave in, like a dog
For there's no more room for wrinkles on this dreary shirt
The thing to do is to wash anew
And clear out, clear out what came before
Now there's nothing
Nothing left from which to draw
Know the weight, the weight once overboard
Will carry, will carry its own load
Use your weight to displace the sea
The glow still warms and that's what warns
The glow still warms and that's what warns to hold...
When there's nothing
Nothing left from which to draw
Know the weight, the weight once overboard
Will carry, will carry its own load
Use your weight to displace the...
When there's nothing
Nothing left from which to draw

Know the weight, the weight once overboard
Will carry its own load
Use your weight to displace the sea
