

So Many of You

Gabriel Bruce

There's so many of you
all in one world standing apart
none of them are true none of them are truly truly in love sing your name on paper but it's just ephemera
trying to break my heart can you do it?
can you make it?
baby can you come?
don't leave me alone here let your body come undone every poor fool deserves a moment in the sun So I'll leave it up to you living through the ages powerless embraces you say nothing ever change but nothing stays the same as when we were all children climbing in the playground falling breaking bones you must have been delightful stubborn little princess pouting through the tears that you know you didn't earn how I'd love to bend down kiss you on the forehead but we were never children and love is an infection yes love is an infection (love is an infection)
a parasite that kills it's host
