

Hometown

Wheatus

I'd trade all my sunshine, for twin towers to hide behind and find you there
And I left on that sunday
To come home on a tuesday Well I never
I never thought I'd have to stay and watch the world explode And I swear it was beautiful before they sent those airplanes
And I thought I would show them to you just like my dad did Home town come tumbling down When she came on that sunday
I took her home the long way
So she could see And she asked when they made it
And would they ever change it
I said no way
Half of what you see and none of what you hear believe And I told her I that they remind me of Motown, sixties, skinny ties,
What they thought the future looked like where the Jetsons lived. Home town come tumbling down So we sat down and we cried
And we ran to the front line
And some came home And I stay off the expressway Nothing to see there anyway That view sucks now But there was a time the Brooklyn traffic couldn't get me down I swear it was beautiful I hope they build it tall again Til then your imagination is all that you will have
