

Gone

KAI

You were my world, you were my song,
You're everything I could depend on,
But now all you are is gone...Bluish gray,
Suns don't rise,
Bathing deep in stolen dreams from borrowed times,
The morning breaks to vacant signs of you.
And the shallow pools,
As if the tears were mine,
Shade the waves' reflections left behind,
I search my faith to never find a clue.And now you're gone,
Somehow your're gone,
You were my midnight, you were my dawn,
You were the shoulder that my life leaned on
You were my world, you were my song,
You're everything I could depend on,
But now all you are is gone...And I passed the blame, and it's past the time,
To cross my heart and walk across that line,
Whose will is this, which poet's lines pull at you?And now you're gone,
Somehow your're gone,
You were my midnight, you were my dawn,
You were the shoulder that my life leaned on
You were my world, you were my song,
You're everything I could depend on,
But now all you are is gone...You were my world, you were my song,
You're everything I could depend on,
But now all you are is gone...

Song Discussions is protected by U.S. Patent 9401941. Other patents pending.

Lyrics provided by

<https://damnllyrics.com/>