

Tell Me, Mechanist

Delain

Tell me, Mechanist, is it true?
Does none of it bother you? And once upon a time
Upon a time behind us
The mechanist inclined
Clockworks of time define us
Who you are, who you are;
Merely springs that tick
The time of things away The cry from the beast is just the noise
Of a spring that you have touched
Not a human: not a voice If only we could go back to the start
(Tell me, Mechanist, is it true?)
We would see we're not that far apart
(Does none of it bother you?)
And realize the likeness of our hearts
(Does none of it bother you?)
If we could go back
We could go back One and the same
Likely to one another
But the mechanist inclined
Merely our kind can suffer
Who you are, who you are
Does it justify
Pleasing your palate
With the other's blood? Tell me why, have the writings on the wall
Nor the dawn of DNA,
Changed a single thing at all? If only we could go back to the start
(Tell me, Mechanist, is it true?)
We would see we're not that far apart
(Does none of it bother you?)
And realize the likeness of our hearts
(Does none of it bother you?)
If we could go back
We could go back to the start Closing Collision:
The end of our divide
Savor the flavor
Of our ancestry rites Closing Collision:
We'll realize in time
No opposition
We're genetically entwined Tell me, Mechanist, is it true?

Does none of it bother you? We could go back to the start

(Tell me, Mechanist, is it true?)

We would see we're not that far apart

(Does none of it bother you?)

And realize the likeness of our hearts

(Does none of it bother you?)

If we could go back

We could go back to the start
