Fell Into the Loneliness

Lori Carson

I should have had faith
I should have taken a chance
I should have laughedI should have risked something
I should have kissed you
I should have told you
I should have let you knowInstead I fell and fell
And fell into the loneliness
I fell and fell and fell
Into the loneliness
I know so wellI could hear your laughter
I could see your breath
I could taste the winter
I could feel my heart raceDo you think that we could fall
And fall into each others arms
Just fall and fall and fall
Into each others arms
Who would it harm?There were all these voices in my head
They said he won't so don't even try
Then listed all the reasons whySnow was on the ground
You were in my reach
Walking there beside me
I should have turned and smiledInstead I fell and fell
And fell into the loneliness
I fell and fell and fell
Into the loneliness
I fell and fell and fell and fell
I fell and fell and fell and fell
