

What Could Have Been

Jordan Mackampa

It was never black and white
Grace was left colorblind
We jumped with closed eyes
A small glimpse of a bright light
Still warms the coldest night
From deep inside...

The core of my bones they hold a secret now
And got the gaze to keep the darkness out

Wasn't it a great life?
If only for a moment
When you were teaching me to take flight
And view something new
Wasn't it a great life?
If only for a moment
When I got to share it all with you

We could never know if this house could be a home for more than a day or two
There's no happy ever after
The silence and the laughter
Only memories
From which we grew

Inside of these bones they hold a secret now
And got the gaze to keep the darkness out
And my bones they hold a secret now
And got the gaze to keep the darkness out

Wasn't it a great life?
If only for a moment
When you were teaching me to take flight
And view something new
Wasn't it a great life?
If only for a moment
When I got to share it all with you

It's my happy ever after
To have the dreams so elegant

In my heart
In my heart
It's my happy ever after
To have the dreams so delicate
In my arms
In my arms
Oh, no

Wasn't it a great life?
If only for a moment
When you were teaching me to take flight
And view something new
Wasn't it a great life?
If only for a moment
When I got to share it all with you
No, no, no
Wasn't it a great life?
If only for a moment
When you were teaching me to take flight
And view something new
Wasn't it a great life?
If only for a moment
When I got to share it all with you
Share it all with you
Share it all with you
