

Advice From A Divorced Gentleman To His Bachelor F

Of Montreal

You should stay away from roses
And be careful to avoid chocolate hearts
Keep distant from romantic notions
Cause that's where love most often starts
Be sure to steer clear of diamonds
And mink coats are most certainly out too
For if she goes in for that kind of thing
Just might fall then what you will do
You know you've always been the sort
Who's truly only fond of the sport
And who will never be satisfied
Reclining in slippers by the fireside
With a wife's constant nagging for things that you can't provide Who no longer bears resemblance to that soft spoken flower
You were so desperate to have for your bride
Too much conversing with a woman tends to dull a man's wit
Never be taken in by poets
Who claim that love if it's pure will never fade
Though love may last all right in a bibliotheque
In the real world man its too easily unmade
So don't take your freedom for granted
Don't let curiosity take you for a ride
As years drag on when you wake up next to her
You'll wish that in your sleep you had died
You'll wish you had died
