

The More I Know You

Leslie Phillips

You're a child with endless questions
Tumbling hard and fast from your soul
Searching for the love behind my eyes You remind me of the one who made you
Splashing in your love for living
Taken with the truth like a bird takes to the sky The more I know you
The more I want you to know
The more I know you
The more I want you to know
The more I know you
The more I want you to know You're not just a notch in my belt
Hunted by religious ego
Conquest for the narrow minded blind For your smile is the pulse of my heartbeats
And I care what you do with your heart
There's no one like you
You're a rare and a precious find The more I know you
The more I want you to know
The more I know you
The more I want you to know
The more I know you
The more I want you to know The more I know you
The more I want you to know
[Incomprehensible]
[Incomprehensible] The more I know you
The more I want you to know
The more I know you
The more I want you to know The more I know you
The more I want you to know
The more I know you
The more I want you to know
The more I know you
The more I want you to know
The more I know you
The more I want you to know
