Blur

Jaya the Cat

Wake up, it's time to go, turn your keys in down at the lobby
No one's looking too awake, but you can't stay here
Pick up your bags and you're gone again
Last night is just a blur
I think I blew it too bad, but I'm just not sure
Stumble out the door and into the van
Use your coat as a pillow on the window, manWho is this body in my bed, what are these voices in my head
Will someone please tell me what's going on Cause it's like last night I got locked between the beers and all the shots
Man, I hope I didn't treat her wrong
Try to place the name, but everything just comes up grey
Guess in the end it just don't mean much anyway
So I turn around in the bed, pull the covers over my head, and I just drift awayAnd I want you to know, that everything changes
You can see it on all of us - everyone's waitingSitting in the bed just watch the white line flashing past
And trying to make sense of my memories
Open up one beer I found there laying on the floor
Put on my headsphones and let the sound just wash right over me
I don't know where I've been, but it don't matter in the end
Maybe it did once, but I just can't remeber when
So it's another night, another town, just plug it in and tune it out
You just drift awayAnd I want you to know, that eveything changes
You can see it on all of us - everyone's waitingWake up, it's time to go, turn your keys in down at the lobby
No one's looking too awake but you can't stay in
Pick up your bags and you're gone again
Last night is just a blur
I think I blew it too bad, but I'm just not sure
Stumble out the door and into the van
Use your coat as a pillow on the window, manWake up, it's time to go, turn your keys in down at the lobby
No one's looking too awake, but you can't stay in
Pick up your bags and you're gone again
Last night is just a blur
I think I blew it too bad, but I'm just not sure
Stumble out the door and into the van
Use your coat as a pillow on the window, man
