

Rare Bird

Kelley McRae

I don't want to take away from you anything that belongs to you
The world will do that enough, I don't need to do it too.
And so I'll wait, watch and listen for the wind to blow on through
And until I feel it come my way at you.

You were still so young and when you flew away so high
You were looking for a home and sometimes hoping you would die
And though your wings are aching tired, you just want to come on down
Rare bird's holding out for higher ground

But I'm about to hear you singing, it's a breathless sort of sound
And to catch you in those moments when you think no one's around
Well it is clear that it is different, that's no secret, that's no shame
Sing out it's how many found their way.

You were still so young and when you flew away so high
You were looking for a home and sometimes hoping you would die
And though your wings are aching tired, you just want to come on down
Rare bird's holding out for higher ground

And the sun sets from a vale, they must be amazing
And it's hard to give that up, though we're sure that you are craving
But you wait and watch and listen for the wind to blow on through
And until you feel it come we will love you.

You were still so young and when you flew away so high
You were looking for a home and sometimes hoping you would die
And though your wings are aching tired you just want to come on down
Rare bird's holding out for higher ground

Though your wings are aching tired you just want to come on down
Rare bird's holding out for higher ground
