All Points

James Vincent McMorrow

In the canyon I was started young
In the ocean, in the valley run
There was hope that time would disappear in the smoke and when the valley clearsAnd I think about the cold air I've been thinking about cold airAnd I was (I was) in the dark I was (I was) in the dark, I wasIn imaginary destiny reached the palms and stretched around the skin Every breath that echoes endlessly every point to ever let it leaveStill I'm thinking of the cold air always thinking of the cold airAnd I was (I was) in the dark I was (I was) in the dark, I wasTripping the call, distance is you Lifting it out, we kept it with odds Thinking the motion that been hurt Sitting in my fortress still I'm in the dark Spilling in to fallness of it allAnd I've been thinking bout the cold air always thinking of the cold airAnd I was in the dark I was in the dark, I was
