

One Love

Hootie & The Blowfish

Sunshine on the horizon
Over two young lovers while it's going down
Somewhere, the same sun rising
On another two lovers as the world goes around
Same scene playing over and over
Same sweet passion, same warm blood
Softly speaking the universal language
So many lovers, one love
One love might make a difference
Might take the walls and tear them down
One light might keep on shining
If we take one love and we spread it around
Old religions, new generations
Call it struggle 'bout a righteous way
Can't see the forest for all the frustrations
So many lying, so many dying but only one love
One love might make a difference
Might take the walls and tear them down
One light might keep on shining
If we take one love and we spread it around
Too many stories with a common thread
Too many roads untraveled, always deceivin'
Same scene, plays over and over and over now
Same young passion, same red blood
Universal language goes unspoken
Too much hatred, too much hatred now but only one love
One love might make a difference
Might take the walls and tear them down
One light might keep on shining
If we take one love and we spread it around
One love might make a difference
I know I might take the walls, might take the walls
And, and tear them down
One light might keep on shining
If we take one love and we spread it around
Sunshine on the horizon
Over two young lovers while it's going down

Lyrics provided by
<https://damnlyrics.com/>