More Than

Wintersleep

I read your letter, printed it up, crumpled up the paragraphs so that I could fit it in my mouth
the words you said
That you were meant for that despite everything you said before
I'm still in your head
And I love you more
More than I said then
More than I said
More than I ever felt before
I love you more
More than I said
More than I ever felt before
I wrote you back that I'd be back for wish I could cut inside your brain so I could see what it looks like inside your head
What do you dream of?
Rivers and streams, love?
These violent dreams chug through my seams
And I love you more
More than I said then
More than I said
More than I ever felt before
And I love you more
More than I said
More than I ever felt before
And I love you more
More than I said
More than I ever felt before
And I love you more
More than I said
More than I ever felt before
I love you more (I love you more)
More than I said (More than I said)
More than I said (More than I said)
More than I ever felt before
I love you more (I love you more)

More than I said (More than I said)
More than I said (More than I ever felt before)
I love you more (I love you more)
More than I said (More than I said)
More than I said (More than I ever felt before)
I love you more (I love you more)
More than I said (More than I said)
More than I said (More than I ever felt before)
I love you more (I love you more)
More than I said (More than I said)
More than I said (More than I ever felt before)
