

My Sunset

Orkidea

It took so long
It felt like the day would never end burning
golden
too high to ever come down but slowly
inevitably
it began it's decent
shadows lengthening
faces turned to gold
colours grew deeper
stronger
patters appearing in clothes and shadows a line of clouds twenty minutes up a false ending
as the organge orb decended into the grey

then it appeared
burning
somehow stronger
more brilliant
below the clouds and above the sea moving faster now
impatient to meet the waves as it dropped the music faded to a whisper computer patters dissolve into ripples on the water the burning circumference fell beneath the horizon the sound down to the ground the silence reverberating a ripple of a applause
perfection here on earth
