

Unspoken Request

Boy Sets Fire

Failed coercion leads to intrusion and the blood forever runs
In her head into her hands between her legs where his mind lies
Power drives him into murder innocence
On the rack of his devices vices and designs She will never scrub the stains from her arms from her neck
From her legs the dirt will remain as a reminder of his hateful face
Reach in rip apart the inner fibers of her soul
Boy you'll never know how it feels to fear the shame Feel free to walk down any dark street without fear
Without shame no one is gonna touch you
And you don't need protection
She shouldn't need protection And you can sit there with that stupid smile on your face
And try to convince me that you care defined by your power
Defined by her body The innocence she feels, everybody else contains It's lost, it's gone but I guess
It doesn't matter anyway
Reach in rip apart the inner fibers of her soul And you can sit there with that stupid smile on your face
And try to convince me that you care defined by your power
Defined by her body Defined, redefined, fucked, tortured and discarded
And if he ever cares maybe he will feel ashamed
For everything he's stolen for all the trust she gave Possessed and broken, she cries but it's not our problem Pull down your goddamn blinds
He will never think he's wrong
She will think you're wrong
She will never feel quite right
