Bigger Scars Make Better Stories

Search The City

Can you see the same sky from where you are?
Do the heavens really stretch so far?
From you to me and all things left in betweenThis is my nightmare, the reason I lie awake at night
But in this ghost town we've doused all the lights
I've got this half moon and I'll save the other half for youSo close, so close, forget it
'Cause close don't count when you're counting on me
This is how we'll ruin everythingStaring at the same stretch of highway for far too long
These winding roads, they never lead me back
To the place that I belongI count the planes as they pass overhead
The engine's warm and will serve as my bed
I slept on the hood of my car to pretend the world was oursSo close, so close, forget it
'Cause close don't count when you're counting on me
This is how we'll ruin everythingI wish that you could see how this is killing me
If bigger scars make better stories
Then you should see the scars on meI've got this half moon, I'll save the other half for you
And every step I take is a step I should be taking
Back to you, to you, to you, to you, to youSo close, so close, forget it
'Cause close don't count when you're counting on me
This is how we'll ruin everythingSo close, so close, forget it
'Cause close don't count when you're counting on me
This is how we'll ruin everythingI wish that you could see how this is killing me
If bigger scars make better stories
Then you should see the scars on meSo close, so close, forget it
'Cause close don't count when you're counting on me
This is how we'll ruin everythingI wish that you could see how this is killing me
If bigger scars make better stories
Then you should see the scars on me
