Right In Front of Me

Josh Wilson

Some say we've all been searching for a God
For years in vain
And some say belief is just the easy way
Around our painAnd sometimes I'd like to agree
When they're telling me that this is all an accident
Because it's hard to let this heart believe
When my mind is screaming out I need more evidence
But do I really need more evidence?I want a miracle, something impossible
So would You help me to believe?
When You say everything that's right in front of me
Is all the proof I'll ever needI hear it in the winter wind
That blows the icy snow against my skin
And I see it in that summer sun
That rises high and then burns out againAnd I feel it in my chest
In the quiet moments that I trust in what You say
Would You help me trust in what You say?I want a miracle, something impossible
So would You help me to believe?
When You say everything that's right in front of me
Is all the proof I'll ever needMaybe this is what it means to question You and still believe
To search and still be satisfied, to know and yet to wonder why
To put my faith things I doubt, to love what I can't figure out, oh
Maybe this is what it meansTo want a miracle, something impossible
But have the faith to still believe
When You say everything that's right in front of me
Is all the proof I'll ever needDon't need a miracle, something impossible
That makes You easy to believe
When You say everything that's right in front of me
Is all the proof I'll ever needYou're all the proof I'll ever need
So would You help me to believe?
