The Need to Be Loved

Jennifer Paz

When a child begins to question,"What this life is all about." Love is a certain something that we just can do without.
The need to be loved is as old as the wind and the sea. Or as young as a mulberry tree on a summer day.
The need to be loved is the song of the lark on the wing. In the winter,the promise of spring. Through the years come what may. When the world falls apart for children,like a broken carousel. That's when we need the warmth of love to tell us what we know so well.
That each little rose needs the help of the rain and the sun and the need is the need to be loved is the same for everyone.

When the world falls apart for children,like a broken carousel. That's when we need the warmth of love to tell us what we know so well.
That each little rose needs the help of the rain and the sun and the need is the need to be loved is the same for everyone.
