Morning Man

Rupert Holmes

I arise to the 5 AM skies

Left over from yesterday

With a moan I reach out for the phone

It's her says, she's on her wayAnd fifteen minutes later

I hear the elevator

I gave her my apartment key So she eases in and lies with mePay my way with a nine to five day She's working a midnight grind

Dressed in white by the dawn's eerie light
She reaches my cobwebbed mindShe brews us up some coffee

And pulls the covers off me I grab her wrist and pull her near

And the night begins to clearMorning man, doesn't take much to wake me

Just you shake your morning man

I've been dreaming of how you'll wake me Since this endless night beganSo curl up with your early riser In my eyes you see the plan

You'll catch up on your sleep this evening And I'll be your morning manEight at night in the last of the light

I wander back home again

Time is cheap 'cause I know she's asleep

And out for the count 'til tenAnd when she's finally wakin'

I'll fix some eggs and bacon

She'll say, "Goodnight, I'm late again"

I'll say, "Goodnight, I'll wait"Morning man, doesn't take much to wake me Just you shake your morning man

I've been dreaming of how you'll wake me
Since this endless night beganSo curl up with your early riser
In my eyes you see the plan
You'll catch up on your sleep this evening
And I'll be your morning man
