

Space

Hootie & The Blowfish

I see it inside your eyes
Feel it in your soul
A part of you is moving on
The other half is gone I don't know what you want from me
No, you lock it all inside
I try to give you everything
But there's nothing else that I can hide We've been trying so long
You've been pushing too hard
You should say what's wrong and echo what's right
You need a little space and I need mine When you and I are all alone
It feels so damn crowded
The house we share is not a home
When you're inside it So, now, I go and grab my things, girl
I must be moving on
I couldn't stand to face you
So I, I guess that's why I wrote this song You've been trying so long
We've been pushing too hard
You should say what's wrong and echo what's right
You need a little space and I need mine Oh, oh, we've been trying so long
You've been pushing too hard
You should say what's wrong and echo what's right
You need a little space and I need mine
You need a little space and I need mine
