Last Night In Brooklyn

Innerpartysystem

Come through the door
A darkened room
She draws white lines to set the mood
We conversate, drink our wine, she kissed my lips then checked the time
We went out to a better place, a different crowd that's more her taste
She blended in, and I don't see all the secrets that she keepsI'm watching, stop moving, stop moving further away
The party is shaking, so why did you have to change
I've given up, I've given all that I can so
I float over you
I float over youMy back is up against the wall
You can't see lies when lights are off
How could you leave, how could you go, I can't be buried here alone
I need to find another face, since honesty is more my taste
Met a foreign girl with a foreign name, said these chemicals will ease the painI'm watching, stop moving, stop moving further away
The party is shaking, so why did you have to change
I've given up, I've given all that I can to you
I float over you
I float over you
I float over you
I float over youI walk up to the open night
I find her there still drawing lines
Should I try to make amends
With tonight and empty friends
You speak in words you never meant
The ones you love already left
Say you piece and moving on
When morning wakes you I'll be goneI float over you
I float over you
I float over you
I float over you
