One Love

Hootie & The Blowfish

Sunshine on the horizon

Over two young lovers while its going down

Somewhere, the same sun rising

On another two lovers as the world goes aroundSame scene playing over and over

Same sweet passion, same warm blood

Softly speaking the universal language

So many lovers, one loveOne love might make a difference

Might take the walls and tear them down

One light might keep on shining

If we take one love and we spread it aroundOld religions, new generations

Call it struggle bout a righteous way

Cant see the forest for all the frustrations

So many lying, so many dying but only one loveOne love might make a difference

Might take the walls and tear them down

One light might keep on shining

If we take one love and we spread it aroundToo many stories with a common thread Too many roads untraveled, always deceivinSame scene, plays over and over now

Same young passion, same red blood

Universal language goes unspoken

Too much hatred, too much hatred now but only one loveOne love might make a difference Might take the walls and tear them down

gut take the wans and tear them do

One light might keep on shining

If we take one love and we spread it aroundOne love might make a difference

I know I might take the walls, might take the walls

And, and tear them down

One light might keep on shining

If we take one love and we spread it aroundSunshine on the horizon

Over two young lovers while it's going down

Lyrics provided by https://damnlyrics.com/