The Gathering

Amorphis

As I sense their steel
As I see the mighty one
As we all gather once again
The Gods of war summon us, summon usNorth wind blows to our valley
Men with ships, with swords, with honorTheir horses between flames
Their dogs eating enemy child
Our heavenly father, what is this mortality
Do you see my mortal agony?Look, I see the shield up high
This must be the sign from my Lord
This can be my death sentence
What a fine day to dieTaste of blood comes up high
Wind blows hard, our men fall one by one
This oath claims me
I must bleed for my generationStrong is the enemy, strong is my sword
The hammer is rising I feel their cold steelLook, I see the shield up high
This must be the sign from my Lord
This can be my death sentence
What a fine day to dieNow when I leave this world
I shall open the mighty oaken gate
And we all shall gather [Incomprehensible] once again
