Front Down Two

Gravity Feed

The apartment was flooded when I came home
Suddenly realizing I'm all alone
Cold harsh reality dripping from above
Would've asked for help, but I think you've done enough

Broken down in the desert, car's gone dead
Walking for miles while the sun cooks my head
I had a backup one when the front tires blew
If only you'd have listened when I said I needed front down two

And then I think
Sometimes life just isn't fair
Feels like I'm driving circles round the ol' town square
I'm sure you don't know, and you don't care
But none of this would have happened if you'd just been there

You borrowed one key, now Iâ€™m missing all that I own
Your whereabouts are puzzling, location unknown
Facts they form together, Iâ€™m beginning to see
If you werenâ€™t here, would anything like this happen to me?

You took my only key, and now my shit is all gone!
I have a tough time understanding exactly what I did wrong
The sum of these scenarios have forced me to see
I couldnâ€™t count on you; youâ€™re just another one to me

Lyrics submitted by Gravity Feed.

Lyrics provided by https://damnlyrics.com/