Glory

Meredith Andrews

I feel the weight of the world
There's a burden on my shoulders
Seems like I'm wasting my words
And my prayers are going no whereThe light and dark are wrestling in my heart
A war for my affections
A hundred voices ringing in my head
A war for my attentionBut I believe You will overcome
All the fear and the fight in me
And my suffering cannot compare
To the weight of Your Glory
Your Glory
Your Glory
Sorrow may last for the night
But joy comes in the morning
There may be heartache in life
But Your wounds will be my healingYour love has won the battle for my soul
I know I'm not alone here
I fix my hope upon Your promises
I'm counting on Your mercyBut I believe You will overcome
All the fear and the fight in me
And my suffering cannot compare
To the weight of Your Glory
Your Glory
Your Glory
But I believe You will overcome
All the fear and the fight in me
And my suffering cannot compare
To the weight of Your Glory
Your Glory
Your GloryBut I believe You will overcome
All the fear and the fight in me
And my suffering cannot compare
To the weight of Your Glory
Your Glory
Your Glory
